
Airport Overview

London Luton Airport is the fourth largest of London's airports, offering flights to major European destinations for passengers from London, the South East, the Midlands and the East of England. The airport provides scheduled and leisure charter passenger, air cargo and business aviation services, general aviation, aircraft maintenance, flight catering, hotels and travel agent services.

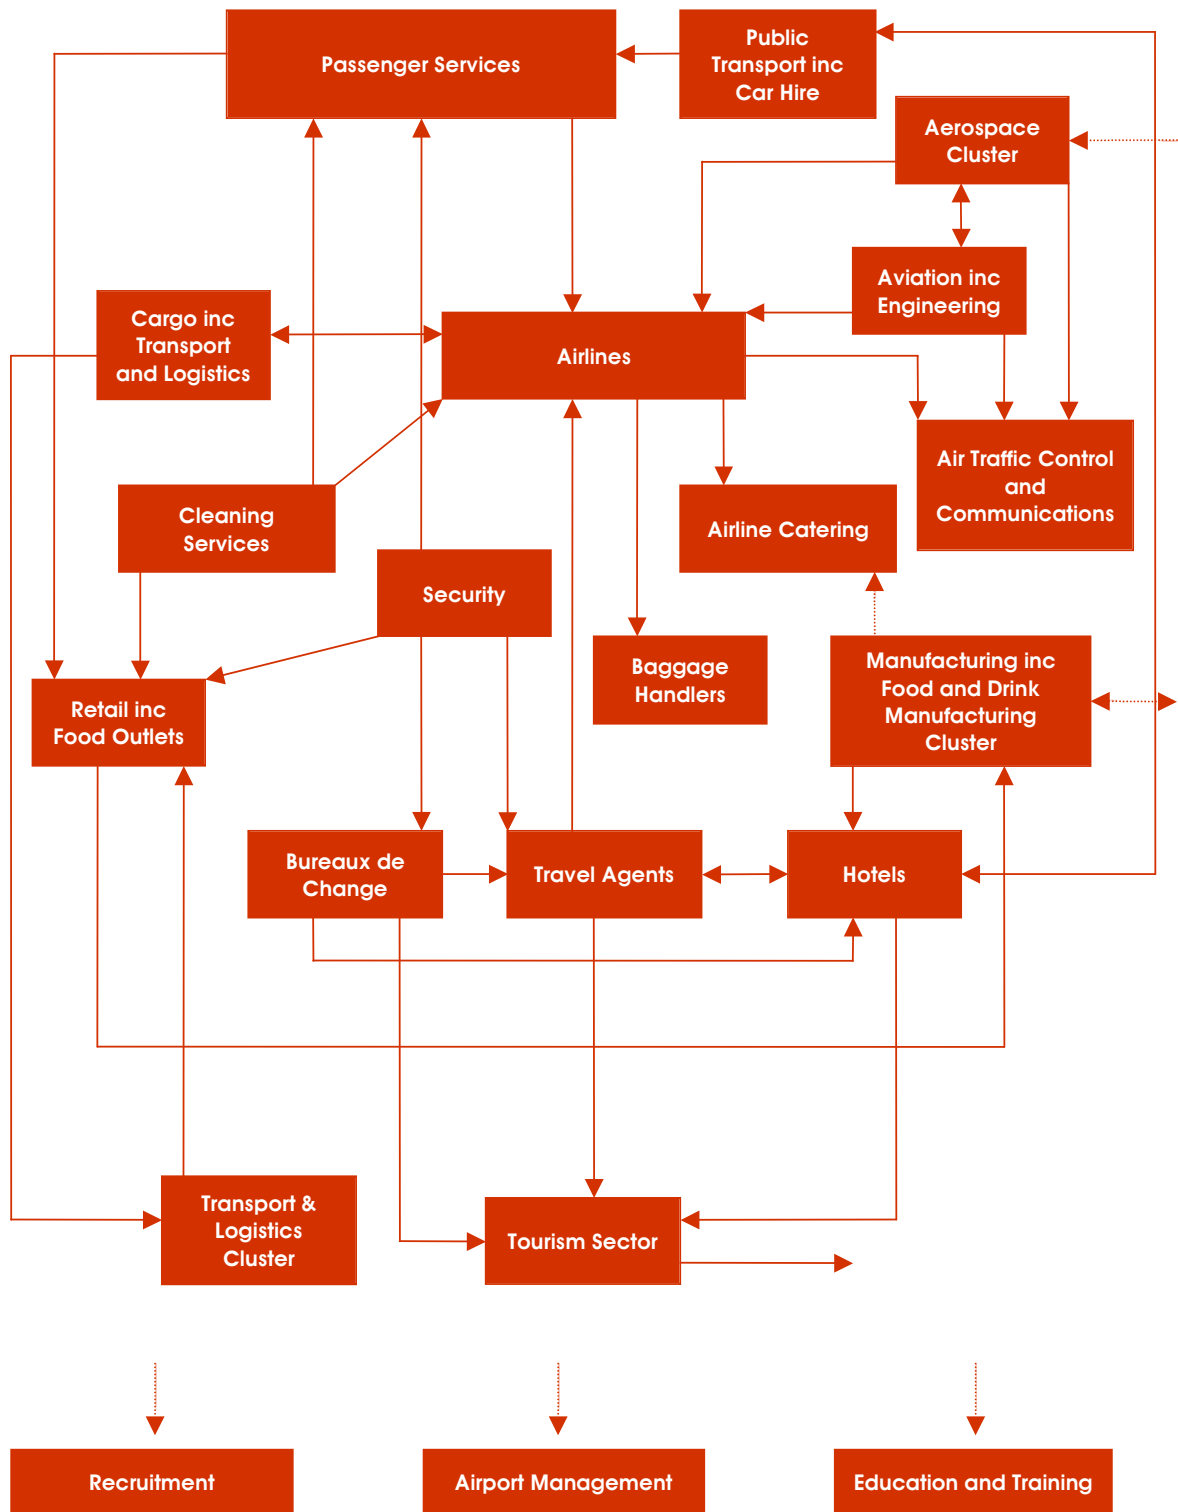

In 2004, 26.1 million tonnes of cargo and 7.5 million passengers were handled. The capacity of the airport is planned to increase to serve 10 million passengers per year.

London Luton Airport is Luton's largest employer and hugely important to the city's economic well being. Employing over 8,000 people, it effectively provides jobs for 14% of all Lutonians. These occur in a variety of fields, supporting all the necessary functions and business services required to support the increasing demands of modern aircraft, airlines and passenger industries.

In the Luton City Growth area there are 660 businesses involved in the airport and it's related business activities – this covers 18% of all businesses in Luton providing employment for 6,017 people. The number of employees is increasing by 6.7% year on year.
